CHÂTEAU D'AYNAC

Standing in 10 hectares of grounds, the property is surrounded by a stone wall and crossed by a stream. Built during the Renaissance (15th and 16th C.) by Jacquette de Ricard de Genouillac, a member of the family of the Lord of Assier. Aynac was for a long while in the possession of the Turenne family, who were opposed to the powerful Cardaillacs. The illustrious family line came to an end in 1906 at the time of the separation of Church and State property. The commune acquired the château in 1972. You can still see its four round towers surrounding the central block (where the lord's apartments were) in which a taller square tower is surmounted by a corbelled out angle turret. The elegance of this monument, a listed Historic Monument since 1988, is accentuated by the roof covering of «lauzes» (stone slabs) and by the domes covering the corner towers with their machicolations.
